

Run: 1843
Date: 2-10-23
Hare: Bronco & Slippery
Venue: Aubrey Cres

15 Hashers gathered at Aubrey Cres eager to get into another mystery run set by Bronco. Even though it was the first Monday night of daylight savings, Hairy must have been concerned about the length of the run as she asked if a torch would be needed. The Hare announced that there was the possibility of getting up close and personal with some native fauna including echidnas, wallabies, koalas and brown snakes in the Robert's Hill Koala Sanctuary. Despite this daunting information 7 Hashers set off in anticipation of what he may have had in store for them and they weren't disappointed. Well actually they were. Unfortunately, after the huge build up (based on local intel), only a lone bush turkey made an appearance.

The drink stop was at the top of Kratz Drive and gave the intrepid runners a well-earned rest and ocean and hinterland views. The bonus for them was being able to see the Hare's massive new erection some 2km away on another ridge. They knew then it was all downhill but still a long way home with a belly full of port.

7 Hashers may have started the run, including the Hare, but it quickly dropped to 5 when 2 of the non-blokes mysteriously disappeared. Thor was the first short-cutting bastard to return home claiming that she had to come back because her ears were so painful. Apparently, she had Hairy on one side of her and Simon on the other side talking non-stop and her head was ready to burst.

Hairy returned not long after as her knees were giving her hell. Centrefold made a surprisingly early return, not even finishing the whole run. He failed to hold ANY checks and continued past an on-back, making his own merry way home, completely missing the drink stop by half a km. He tried to justify his actions claiming CH4 markings could be interpreted differently than other hashes. Despite this he claimed to have been on trail and had done 4km.

The true athletes returned just on dark and were ready to eat, drink and be merry, knowing that they had completed the whole gruelling run.

Nosh consisted of nibbles followed by Lamb Ragu with Penne and ice-creams for dessert.

CHARGES AND DOWNS

SHIT OF THE WEEK – Centrefold fell on his sword (ouch) and gave himself SOW because he had asked the trusty op-shop girls to try and get him a high chair. Because they were unsuccessful in their first attempt, he became impatient and ordered one online. BUT the girls came through for him, picking one up off the side of the road - unfortunately it was all in vein.

HARES – Bronco & Slippery – Centrefold gave his run report and after praising the sumptuous meal and giving very positive feedback on the run, ie: well-marked, good length, etc, etc, everyone thought there was a big chance of a top score....BUT the RA couldn't help himself. He gave the food a 7 but the run was marked down for some bullshit reason and only scored 0.5 so the total of 7.5 was a big disappointment. Mind you it's the best score Bronco & Slippery have ever had since the tradition of giving dodgy run reports was introduced.

THOR, LIFER & LUCKLESS – Luckless & Lifer dobbed in Thor about Hairy and Simon talking non-stop on the run and ended up having to join her – Luckless finally finishing her down 10mins later

DANGLES – charged himself for backing Collingwood and winning, but I think he was just thirsty

METRO – put his hat back on in the circle because he was thirsty too

SLIPPERY - because the RA thought she looked thirsty

DARCY – tried to give a charge but it backfired and he ended up with the down

SIMON – talking on the run

AWARDS

LUCKLESS – Big Wooden Dick – because Billy is out of action for a while after his lobotomy and the Mad Cow – sounding like a mad cow after nearly choking on her first down

THOR – Glomesh bag – not sure why

GB

The GM felt a little sorry for the RA having to turn down the offer of the 'free-from-the -roadside' high chair, so he picked a little something up for him. Centrefold was presented with a beautiful framed photograph of Floriade in Canberra to remind him of home. He was so excited to receive this heartfelt gift from Bronco, that he immediately was heard to say "it's going straight to the (bin ughhh) POOL ROOM!"
