Alky's Run Number
647 of 4th September
2000

Would you Trust this Woman?

Baby or no baby in the arms of this politically correct brain surgeon, you'd at least think the purchase of a decent map to decipher the contours of the Beacon Hill / Jetty area of Coffs would be in order, but not so it appears, as every bloody hill in creation was included in the "Cryptic Clue" Run set by Alky. To get the toxins going ga-ga, Alky had us start by running up & over the Camper-down railway overpass, & then towards the Pier & past it, up to Collingwood St & then On to the Promenade. We next scarpered towards & around Coffs Hospital & into Victoria St, for the most anyway via Hogbin Drive. All the little curly & bent bits of streets were then engaged to somehow wend our way into Edinburgh St via stairs that were originally designed to get one to heaven, only to find more stairs going the other way, down, down & down again the way we came, over the railway to nirvana, HOME.

Alky then disappeared, only to reappear bearing gifts of unbuttered bread, non-salted & unpeppered chips, unlemoned fish, & no bleedin' serviettes to wipe away the...tears. On-On!!!

Special Points:

We have now appeared in the Independent Newspapers new A-Z of Sport section, telling the public of our runs.

We will attempt to have something appear each week, but there's no guarantee, so PLEASE do your bit & try & get new runners along for a trot.

Any suggestions will be readily listened to, & probably ignored, but try us anyway.

On-On!!!
